Wrapping Up & Taking Off!

I'm down to my final five weeks in Australia and find myself busy wrapping up projects, completing my life coaching certification, selling my belongings and arranging for storage (free with some friends). Leaving is bittersweet as I have such great memories here and truly hope to return some day. When? Only time will tell.

Once I depart Australia, my year is full! I will spend April in the Philippines then journey on to Kenya where I will spend three months working and ministering with churches and local organizations. I should hear any day now on my FINAL approval for the DTS I've applied to, however I have been assured there should be no problems accepting me. YEAH!!! This particular DTS is called Bluewater and will take place on a boat in the Mediterranean based around Sicily. We will do ministry at each port we stop at in Europe alongside YWAM's Mercy Ships and other partners. I anticipate the training with each teacher (that flies in) as well as my interaction with the others on board will be a life changing experience that I will then be able to pour out during the outreach times on shore.

Philippines - April '10

I received my Itinerary last week for the ministry I will be involved in while in the Philippines. I am blown away by the opportunities my contacts have lined up for me!
